On Sails of Stone (classic)

Through his long career creating watershapes ranging from small fountains to large waterfalls and streams, landscape artist and sculptor Frederick L. Gregory always sought to harmonize the primordial splendors of nature with current times and settings. Deceased in August 2017 at age 79, Gregory became renowned for sculpting granite, creating harmonies that deftly merged the asymmetry of Japanese gardens with the sensual abstractions of tropical Brazilian landscapes, in compositions that often involved the mesmerizing qualities of water.
