Restoring a Treasure on the Hudson

Drakeley Pool Co., takes on a broad range of projects, from massive commercial installations to super high-end residential projects. The company also refurbishes historic watershapes, a discipline that requires careful adherence to the original design. Featured here, Bill Drakeley shares a simple gem of a project designed by 20th Century modernist master, Marcel Breuer.

The Ancient Beauty of Cenotes

To the ancient civilizations of the Yucatan Peninsula, bodies of water known as cenotes were both essential and worships as the watery portals to the netherworld. Today, these remarkable natural bodies of subsurface water remain objects of enchantment, and great places to take a dip.

A Wild Retreat

The untamed profusion of the South Florida landscape informed the design of this expressive garden by master landscape architect, Raymond Jungles. Filled with native plants and deep, inviting waters, it's a haven for abundant local wildlife as well as a luxurious retreat for the homeowners and a haven for their pet pig.
