Luxury Liner Notes

Once derided as “baggies,” pools with vinyl liners have now taken their place in the world of custom watershaping, advancements due to the flexibility of shape and wide spectrum of patterns, colors and textures. This beautiful remodel stands as a perfect example, says Columbian watershaper, Christophe Garces.

(classic) Subterranean Energy

Geothermal energy is a perfectly renewable source in the truest sense of the term, says Doug Cook in this groundbreaking WS classic, because it comes directly from nature in virtually limitless, inexhaustible quantities. In that sense, it's comparable to solar and wind energy, except for the fact that it is always there, day and night, no matter the season, the weather or any other factor that might intercede: It's always there, just below the earth's surface.

Ages of Indulgence

Historians can only guess how long humans have been enjoying the benefits of hot water in natural geothermal springs. One place in Italy believed to be made by the gods is estimated to have been in continuous, year-round use by health and pleasure seekers for more than 20,000 years – and remains one of Tuscany’s most popular attractions.
