Reflecting the High Life

Four years in the making, this Ohio project gave Jerry Hammerschmidt and his staff at High-Tech Pools an opportunity to execute at the highest possible level, both in terms of design collaboration, and construction. Here he pulls back the curtain on a project that deftly blends modern and classic motifs in a uniquely luxurious estate setting.

P804: Plumbed Snorkel Detail

There is much more to making a perimeter overflow detail work than meets the eye. What looks like a thin slot at the edge of the water surface conceals the gutter and required plumbing below. This detail shows the dropouts, main drainage line and the snorkel detail necessary for reducing noise from air being drawn into the system.

Is Swimming in Pools Healthier Than in Nature?

While "wild swimming" has dramatically increased in popularity in recent years, the question remain whether or not it's actually better for you than swimming in man-made bodies of water, such as swimming pools. Sciencealert.com unpacks the healthful facts.

They call them "wild" waters for a reason.

Dangerous Playgrounds of the Past

Recreational amenities weren't always as safe as they are now. In fact, some were downright dangerous, as illustrated by this collection of hazardous playgrounds of the later 19th and early 20th centuries.

Treacherous contraptions of yore.

Forever Bamboo Offers Sealant Product Line

Forever Bamboo (San Diego, CA) makes a family of bamboo sealants and stains to protect and add color to bamboo structures including fences, poles, slats and borders. It can contain oils and pigments, depending on the individual product's purpose. When you use a stain or sealant, you apply it to bamboo like you would paint. The application results in a more vibrant, glossy and durable structure. Sealant also adds waterproofing and extends the life of bamboo structures.
