Spatial Emotion

Designing spaces for human use -- especially those of the recreational variety -- starts by understanding that the primary goal is to generate a positive emotional response, regardless of style, the size of the property or the client's budget. That's why Mike Farley considers the ways that different spatial configurations make his clients feel.

Historically Gigantic Seaweed Blob Threatens Florida (but could it save the world?)

A mat of seaweed twice the size of the U.S. is headed toward Florida, raising the specter of dirty, stinky beaches and possible harm to coastal ecosystems. Record algal blooms are becoming more common as a result of climate change, while at the same time, farming seaweed might be a powerful weapon in the war against permanent environmental damage.

A Recipe for Jambalaya (classic)

Once the site of an abandoned sewage plant, Jambalaya Park in Gonzalez, La., stands as testimony to just how ambitious a renovation project can be. As Les Ewen reports, the first attempt at installing the park's fountain and Koi pond ended in a shambles, at which point he and his staff put the city's plans back on track.
